
Protected coalition markers sit at zero in every one of these benchmark scenarios, under these parameter settings: the countermeasure configuration reduces the mixed attack to the same degree as it reduces each single vector. The wider randomised trials retain a non-zero residual, so this is a statement about these scenarios, not a general impossibility result.